EXAM BOARD: WJEC

Why study Criminology?

An understanding of criminology is pertinent to many job roles within the criminal justice sector, social and probation work as well as sociology and psychology.

The WJEC Level 3 Applied Diploma in Criminology is a qualification with elements of law, psychology and sociology that go well with studies in humanities.

This is an 'Applied General' qualification which means it is designed mainly to support students progressing to university. It offers exciting and interesting experiences that focus learning for Sixth Form students through acquiring knowledge and understanding in purposeful contexts associated with the criminal justice system. This qualification would support learners' progression from any study at Level 2, particularly GCSEs in Citizenship, Humanities, History, Law and Sociology.

Each unit within the qualification has an applied purpose which acts as a focus for learning. The applied purpose requires learning that is related to authentic case studies. It also requires students to consider how the use and application of their learning has an impact on themselves, other individuals, employers, society and the environment.

The applied purpose will also allow students to learn in such a way that they develop:

- skills required for independent learning and development
- skills that are generic and transferable
- the ability to solve problems
- project-based research, development and presentation
- ability to work in conjunction with other professionals, in a professional environment
- ability to apply learning in vocational contexts
